English for Life

An introduction to the Cambridge EFL Examinations

Every year more than half a million people take Cambridge examinations in English as a Foreign Language (EFL). They take them in order to improve their employment prospects, to seek further education, to prepare themselves to travel or live abroad, or because they want an internationally recognised certificate showing the level they have attained in the language. The Cambridge EFL examinations are amongst the world's best known qualifications for learners of English and are recognised by universities, employers and national education authorities in many countries. They are run by the University of Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate (UCLES)- one of the world's largest and best known educational assessment agencies.

Examinations are available at five levels. Each examination covers all the four language skills - listening, speaking, reading and writing – and assesses the ability to use a variety of structures and functions in authentic situations and different contexts. Above all, the Cambridge examinations judge the candidates' ability to communicate effectively in English.

LEVEL 5	Certificate of Proficiency in English
LEVEL 4	Certificate in Advanced English (CAE)
LEVEL 3	First Certificate in English (FCE)
LEVEL 2	Preliminary English Test
LEVEL 1	Key English Test
